ERF ANNUAL CONFERENCE

The Economic Research Forum's (ERF) Annual Conference has evolved over the past 17 years to become the most important regional platform for ERF and non-ERF affiliates to discuss frontier thinking about economic development, learn from one another and interact with international scholars. This time, the conference will be held in Antalya, Turkey, March 20-22, 2011. It is expected to host more than 200 participants.

Conference Theme

Typically, economic conferences are about developing a better understanding of specific economic problems; their magnitudes, theoretical foundations and determinants and infrequently what can be done about them. Rarely do these conferences pay attention to the political context within which these policies are framed and the interests they are intended to serve. This conference is different in that its primary emphasis is on the interaction between politics, economic policies and development outcomes.

Plenary Session 1: Democracy (Open Society) and Economic Development: the Politics of Policymaking

This plenary session will revisit the relationship between the nature of political regimes (democratic or not), policymaking processes and development outcomes. The speakers will answer such questions as: does it take an open (democratic) society to achieve better development outcomes? Are the few cases of non-democratic regimes achieving successful development the exception and why? Is democracy inevitable once progress is made on the economic front? And what do we know about how societies become more open economically and politically?

Plenary Session 2: Do Institutional Constraints on Policy-makers Work?

Given the political regime, does it matter whether a country adopts institutional reforms that put constraints on policymakers, for example, to promote central bank independence, fiscal balance, effective stabilization funds, capital account stability or decentralization of decision-making? Under which conditions are these rules effective and credible? This session will focus on assessing the experience of different countries, highlighting the features and underlying conditions that make these rules successful.

Plenary Session 3: Political and Economic Transformation

Inspired by the recent developments in the region, this session will explore the drivers and dynamics of political and economic transformation, with a special focus on the ERF region. The speakers will address such questions as to what extent does the recent regional furor invalidate the authoritarian bargain model, in which people are assured certain economic gains in return for accepting limited political freedom? Is there a tipping point at which this bargain breaks down? And, in light of these changes, what can the rest of the region expect, going forward?

Parallel Sessions

There will be six parallel sessions, covering the following broad areas of economics:

1. Institutional Economics/Governance
2. Finance
3. Macroeconomics
4. International Economics
5. Labor and Human Development
6. Microeconomic and Sectoral Studies

Special Events and Meetings

1. Meeting of the ERF Advisory Committee
2. Workshop on the Jordanian Labor Market in the New Millennium
3. Thematic Leaders Meeting
4. Meeting of the Editorial Board of the ERF Journal (Middle East Development Journal, MEDJ)
5. Research Fellows Meeting
6. Speech by James Robinson (Harvard University and ERF)
7. Meeting of the ERF Board of Trustees
8. Closing and Best Paper Award Ceremony
